Improving orphan articles

1. Checking what is already linked (for orphans, usually nothing)
   o An "orphan article" is an article that has nothing (or very little) that links to it: this is bad for visibility!

2. Good starts: notable alumni, colleagues, family members, awards received
Assigning yourself articles

Why: so your contributions are tracked How:

Make sure to assign both the original orphan article AND the article you are linking back to them !!!

Editing 101

1. Enabling visual editor (for those scared of source codes [me])
   o Navigate to the preferences section in personal settings
   o From there, navigate to "Editing" and check "Enable the visual editor"

2. Actually editing your article (!!!!!!)
   o Press "Edit" in the top toolbar (this is the easy part)
Editing 102

2. Actually editing your article (!!!!!!)
   o Navigate to where you will be linking your person
   o After adding them to the text, use the "Link" button to automatically link back to their Wiki ▪ Select the appropriate link

3. Citing your sources
   o There is also a handy "Cite" button!
   o Place your cursor where you will be inserting your source prior to pressing "Cite"

Editing 103

3. Citing your sources
   o Using the same source from the original article
   o Press "edit source" in the subsection you are working from ▪ Copy everything between the two "<ref>"s
     ▪ Paste into the "Automatic" tab after pressing "Cite"; Press "Create"
     ▪ If shown multiple options, click "Insert" on the correct one
     ▪ (IF there are issues with your source, like mine, let me know and I can help fix it!)

4. Publish your changes!!!!
   o Describe your changes
     ▪ Eg "linked so-and-so's wiki"
